Sodexo's Scottish Offshore teams voted best in sector by British Safety Council

Aberdeen, Scotland – April 2014 Sodexo, world leader in Quality of Daily Life Services, is delighted to announce that its Scottish Offshore team received the prestigious British Safety Council Award 2014. The award recognises competence in terms of health and safety management systems and the winners are chosen from over 500 entries each year after careful adjudication by an independent panel of chartered health and safety professionals. See www.britsafe.org/isa for more details.

Sodexo's Scottish Offshore teams secured an impressive merit commendation. Better still, they have now won this award for an outstanding 15 consecutive years. This sets Sodexo apart from its competitors, as no other offshore hotel services provider can boast the same.

Perhaps more significantly, Sodexo's team in Scotland were thrilled to be awarded the first ever Sector Awards - for outstanding safety operations in the Hotel, Catering & Hospitality category. John Fraser (Offshore Operations Manager) and Ian Russell (Managing Director in Aberdeen) collected the prize at a gala dinner held at the famous Grosvenor House Hotel in London on Friday 25 April.

Commenting on the achievement, John Fraser said, "I am very proud to have won this first ever Sector Award for the Hotel, Catering & Hospitality industry. It proves that HSE Management is a top priority at Sodexo - it's in our culture – and it's a fundamental we share with our clients and customers alike."

Ian Russell comments, "Every day, thousands of customers rely on our safety systems, so our performance in this area is crucial. Winning this inaugural sector award clearly demonstrates Sodexo's global commitment to achieving a health & safety culture, improving workforce engagement and maintaining world class performance. Moreover this recognition will provide greater motivation for our teams who remain fully focussed on continual improvements in our safety results."
